FIRST POTATO TAX PAYMENT MADE MONDAY

A significant event in the history of Maine's agricultural industry took place at Augusta, Monday, when S. B. Bishop of Caribou handed a check for $2.06 to Everett Groaton, executive-secretary of the Maine Development Commission. This was the first payment on the cent a barrel tax on potato shipments, passed by the last Legislature, to raise funds for advertising and merchandising the great annual harvest.

Mr. Bishop shipped the first carload of the expected 1937 crop of over 50,000,000 bushels last week, securing them from growers John McDaniel, Morton Christensen, Charles Raymond and Paul Cyr, all of Caribou. There were 206 barrels of high grade cobbles and they were quickly sold in the Boston market.

Mr. Bishop collected the tax from the growers and drove here to give the check to Mr. Groaton. This money will be turned over to the State Treasurer but the promotional activity will be handled by the Development Commission. This is the first time in the history of the State that shipments of a product have been taxed for such a purpose.

On Wednesday an advisory committee appointed by the Development Commission in co-operation with the Department of Agriculture will meet at the State House to discuss and develop a program for utilizing this fund.

HARVEY D. BROWN

Harvey Dee Brown of Germantown, Penna., director of the Philadelphia Health Council, died suddenly Friday night at Bethel Inn, where he with his wife and son in law had been spending two weeks. He was born in Earlsville, N. Y., June 25, 1869, the son of Deles D. and Olive L. Brown. Besides his wife, Mrs. Bess Stewart Brown, he is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Raymond Greenman. The remains were taken to Rochester, N. Y., for funeral services and burial.

Skillingston Mill Property To Be Operated Under Ownership Of Massachusetts Men

A transaction of vital interest to the townspeople took place the first of this week when the buildings, plant and good will of the Skillingston mill were bought by Edwin W. Childs of Needham and his son, Arnold C. Childs, of Quincy, Mass. The mill has been closed the past four months and orders have been filled from another plant, but the new owners expect to resume operation of the mill here within two weeks. While the present output of the mill is confined to spools it is expected that the manufacture of hardwood novelties may be taken up later and a birch mill to supply material for the mill established. It is understood that the business will be continued under the Skillings name as it has been for over 70 years.

The manufacture of spools will be in charge of Elias Robinson, who has had many years of experience in this work. Arnold Childs, who has been in the sales department of the Anderson Engineering Co., will be the manager of the business here, assisted by Russell Davis of Bridgewater, Mass., Mr. and Mrs. Childs will move to Bethel as soon as arrangements can be made.

Many years ago this enterprise was the property of the Bethel Steam Mill Company manufacturing lumber and dower stock. In 1869 it came under the control of W. E. Skillings and in 1880 the saw mill was converted into a spool factory. In 1873 Mr. Skillings installed a saw mill supply plant at Gilead which ten years later was purchased by J. P. Skillings. In 1885 the brothers formed a partnership which continued until 1890 when the business was absorbed by the American Bobbin, Spool and Shuttle Co. The following year Julius P. Skillings acquired possession of the property which since has been operated under his name.

Julius P. Skillings died in 1925 and his widow, Mrs. Alice Stowell-Skillings being sole owner of the business took charge and continued the business, with the assistance of Nahum P. Moore as Sales Manager and Elias S. Robinson as Superintendent of the mill. In 1931 Mrs. Skillings married Mr. Robinson, and upon the death of Mr. Moore in 1932, continued the business. In spite of vicissitudes, two disastrous floods in which the business lost a great deal of money, and the depression of 1929, Mrs. Robinson continued the business, being actuated by the fact that some 50 people depended on the mill for their livelihood. The Skillingston mill community and the men and their families were always the first consideration of Mr. Skillings, and since his death Mrs. Robinson has assumed this attitude.

BERNARD BARTLETT PLACES THIRD IN GARDEN GRADING

Bernard Bartlett of East Bethel won third prize in the state garden grading contest held at the annual State 4-H Camp at University of Maine, August 21. Each county had a club member participating. Contestants graded potatoes and answered true and false and narrative questions on the Maine State Branding law. Bernard is a member of the Snappy Eight Club led by Mrs. Gladys Tyler. He is enrolled in the potato project this year. Last year he raised turkeys for his project. This club, of which Bernard is a member, is the only club in the county to have a club project. They have a certified seed potato plot, which the members care for during the season. The potatoes are divided up among the members for their next year's projects. The surplus seed is sold. This is the third year that this club has had this plot. Four of the club boys have had their individual projects certified this year.

Misses Eugenia Haselton and Sylvia Bird have gone to East Sebago where they have employment.

DANIEL R. QUMBY

Daniel R. Qumby of Gilead passed away at the Berlin hospital this morning, where he had been the past 11 days suffering from infection in the ankle followed by blood poisoning.

He was born in Gilead Nov. 5, 1917, the son of Charles C. and Edith Cole Qumby. He was educated in the schools of Gilead and at Gould Academy where he graduated in 1936. Since graduation he has worked on the home farm at Gilead.

He is survived by his parents and one brother, C. Custer Qumby, of Bethel.

Funeral services will be held at the Gilead church Sunday.

BETHEL'S "MILTON" ROAD FEDERAL PROJECT

Plans are made for the construction this fall of 1.46 miles of road in Bethel between the Milton and Woodstock town lines. This is a secondary Federal road project.

The Highway Commission is advertising for bids and it is expected that construction will start soon after the contract is awarded.

GALLAGHER COUNSEL FOR LIQUOR COMMISSION

The Governor and Executive Council appointed William C. Gallagher of Norway as counsel and attorney-general for the Maine State Liquor Commission, succeeding John P. Carey, Bath, who resigned recently after serving the Commission since its inception. Gallagher, a former deputy U. S. District Attorney, will work under Attorney General Franz U. Burkett, but his salary will be fixed and paid by the commission.

THREE STATES NOT LISTED

Three states and Alaska are still needed to complete the list of cars from every state, territory and Canadian province to be seen in or near Bethel village. The names now lacking are Nevada, New Mexico, and Utah. With auto traffic at its present level the remaining states should be represented in town before the end of the month. The State's advertising for vacationists seems to be getting results, and the tourists are frequently heard speaking favorably of the attractions they find here.

BISHOP—EDWARDS

A very lovely mid-summer wedding was solemnized at high noon, on Saturday, August 14, at the home of Judge and Mrs. A. E. Bishop, Newport, Vt., when Miss Betty Edwards, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Harry Edwards, became the bride of Kendall H. Bishop, only son of Judge and Mrs. A. E. Bishop. Rev. John Robert Gee performed the single ring ceremony. Only the immediate families of the bridal couple were present. Preceding the ceremony Howard Davis, a friend of the couple, sang "I Love You Truly."

The bride was most becomingly arrayed in a wedding gown of white figured chiffon with matching accessories. She wore a corsage of red roses. Immediately after the ceremony a wedding reception was held. The happy couple left by auto for a wedding trip to Portland and upon their return they will reside in Newport.

Mrs. Bishop formerly lived in Bethel and is a graduate of Gould Academy in the class of 1935. She is employed in the office of the Unemployment Compensation Commission in Montpelier. Mr. Bishop is a graduate of Newport High School in the class of 1932 and is employed at present at Pine Bluff Lodge on Lake Memphremagog.

MRS. HUBERT E. YORK

Mrs. Elizabeth Grover York, wife of Hubert E. York, died Monday afternoon in the yard at the home of Dr. R. R. Tibbets as she was leaving the car to go into his office for treatment. She had not been well for a number of years, and since last December her condition had been considered serious.

She was born in Albany, July 15, 1873, the daughter of Leander and Lydia Wheeler Grover. At the age of 14 years she began teaching school and for 12 years taught in this vicinity as well as at Magalloway and Watford.

On May 1, 1900 she was married to Hubert E. York and has since lived in Bethel, Watford, Norway, Stoneham, Albany, and Woodstock. She was a member of the Congregational Church.

Besides her husband, she is survived by two daughters, Mrs. W. Albert Skillings and Miss Priscilla York; eight grandchildren; three sisters, Mrs. Arvilla Wilson of Northwest Bethel, Mrs. Letha Churchill of Albany and Mrs. Constance Wheeler of Bethel; and two brothers, Channing Grover of Limington and Selden L. Grover of Albany.

Funeral services are held at the Greenleaf funeral home this Thursday afternoon, Rev. W. R. Patterson of Cape Porpoise officiating. Interment is at the Mount Will cemetery.

Albert has been in club work for five years. He has been enrolled in Garden and Chick Raising projects. This fall he is entering the University of Maine at Orono.

Is Physical Planning Wise For New England?

Victor M. Cutter, Chairman
N. E. Regional Planning Commission

The New England Regional Planning Commission is not working to spend money, but to save it, and to decrease, not increase, taxation. It believes that New England should have the finest public works in the world but it desires to see these constructed only when the necessity for them has been proven and money is available for construction without unduly burdening our people.

Our region is still suffering from the fact that without any particular plan we just grew, and, without forethought, became the most highly industrialized and richest section of our country, in spite of the fact that we did not have the fat natural resources enjoyed by the other sections. We never have had natural gas, oil, minerals, or coal in New England. We have had timber resources, fisheries, water power—we have exhausted these resources have been wasted in other regions.

Our timber has been cut off; our fisheries destroyed by pollution in our rivers, lakes, ponds and much of our seacoast; we have never taken an inventory of our water resources. Our farm lands, never very rich, have been wastefully used and are being largely abandoned. Our system of transportation was never planned; our railroads are abandoning spurs; we are relocating highways and replacing public buildings and works of all kinds which have been thoughtlessly constructed in the past.

In spite of this New England has prospered, but it is doubtful whether it will continue to prosper under modern competitive conditions. Yankee ingenuity still exists, but why wait until we are in a slump comparable to that we have suffered in textile and shoes in the recent past? Why not exercise a bit of forethought and plan for the future?

Dictatorships and regimentation are only possible where a people or a community is supine and shiftless. In spite of our individualism we have always believed that "in union there is strength." It is evident that we should take thought for our future and do for ourselves rather than let someone else do us.

Common sense physical planning for a town, county, state, or region we do for ourselves as individuals. Is for the community exactly what we plan our houses, our budgets, our businesses and our vacations. All we spend for this planning is a little time and thought. Just so for the community a little time and thought, which can be readily obtained from public spirited citizens without pay and with a minimum of expenditure for office space and clerical assistance, will produce for us plans which would save vast sums of money.

There is no need at the moment to plan for new expenditures. When our local and state budgets are formed and are cut down, we still have left millions of dollars to be expended for public works. Should we not objectively and impartially plan how these millions may be spent most wisely, not only for the moment, but for the future?

Specifically, the best estimates show that for the next ten years in New England we will spend for public works—local, state, and federal—about $220,000,000 per year. We have in the past been spending more than this. We have seen two severe floods—1927 and 1936—cause actual damages of over $100,000,000, an amount more than sufficient to give complete control and freedom from damage in all ordinary floods and a very considerable measure of protection in the case of the greatest flood in history. Due to lack of planning we have seen public buildings replaced, roads reconstructed, and during the last few years, large numbers of unemployed put to work on uneconomic projects; our cities still have slum areas; our transportation problems are unsolved; and wasteful expenditure for public works still continues.

We are squarely faced with the question as to whether this must continue, or whether we can plan to save many millions of dollars in the near future. We have in New England numerous local planning boards, state planning boards, and a regional planning commission composed of the heads of the state planning boards. All of these organizations are operating without pay, their only expenditures being for clerical help and office space.

A very conservative estimate of the expenditure necessary to insure adequate consideration of public works projects before any money is spent, and to do this on an engineering basis, and budgeting of our income and expenses, would amount to less than one-half of 1% of the amounts which will be spent for public works. This certainly is an extremely cheap rate for insuring orderly future development of New England. It is an expense carried under the head of "research" by every well-managed corporation. For this small sum of one-half of 1% we can determine the best uses for our land; a complete water resources program, including power, navigation, flood control, pollution, and recreational use; we can plan complete aviation development for our region; we can provide for regional highways, freeways, and parkways; we can inventory our present recreational facilities and plan needed additions.

New England agriculture is in a precarious situation. Our farm units are small as compared with the rest of the country, and our farmers, even for our truck crops are experiencing the most severe competition, not only from other sections of our own country, but from the rest of the world, particularly the tropics. It is impossible for any one of our farmers to keep thoroughly informed as to the most profitable crops to raise in our section. Regional planning, which takes into consideration not only local but state, national and world conditions, will readily indicate what we can do to rehabilitate this most important industry.

All of these estimates can for this small amount of money be based on facts and data already available and needing only correlation and tabulation, and which will include estimates of our future population, industrial trends and other facts without which no plan will serve any useful purpose. All this data can be continually kept up to date and all plans can be continually revised according to changing conditions, for an annual appropriation of somewhat less than the amount above mentioned.

Other sections of the country are making physical plans and preparing for the future, already spending sums far above those suggested for New England. All these figures refer to planning expenditures which must be made and without reference to expenditures for new or untried experiments and projects.

Under the proposed set-up, for which the machinery is already in existence, plans can be made which are so useful and practical that there is little question but that New England would receive the cordial cooperation of the federal government. In other words, if we actively take an interest in our own welfare, prosperity, and future development and make practical plans to assure our future, it would make ridiculous any thought of regimentation and render it impossible to impose upon us arbitrary authorities such as have been deemed necessary for sections unable to plan for their own future.

ABUSE OF ANIMALS ALLEGED

From a neighboring community
our correspondent sends an item concerning the claimed mistreatment of some kittens. It seems some persons left on a vacation shutting in the kittens; shutting out the mother cat. Some of the neighbors are all riled up, claiming a deliberate attempt to starve the young kittens.

The Citizen is interested in getting every bit of news it can. But think of our position in a matter
such as outlined. Our correspondent is acting in good faith in transmitting the indignation of some of the neighbors. At the same time he gives no names; leaves room for a reasonable doubt that the people did the starving act on purpose. Should we print this item in his news the indignant neighbors are going to be pleased and may (or may not) buy papers to read about it. The owners of the cats (whether the story is true or not) are going to be equally displeased and cancel their subscriptions (if any).

Wouldn't it be best in a case of this kind for the indignant neighbors to notify an officer of the humane society?

Our correspondent could then write us the findings of the trained investigator they might send and the results of prosecution if any were made. That would be real news. Nobody can be indignant if we print the truth as proven.

Happenings That Affect the Dinner
Pails, Dividend Checks and Tax Bills of Every Individual, National and International Problems
Inseparable from Local Welfare

Not since 1917 has a major nation declared war. Yet in the intervening years there have been a number of far-reaching, sanguinary conflicts. What might be termed Mars' modern technique does not require a formal declaration of war — armies are mobilized, soldiers and civilians are slaughtered,
cities are devastated and governments change even while, officially speaking, actual war does not exist.

In Italy's Ethiopian campaign,
for example, war was not declared
— but the result of the invasion
was to eliminate the Ethiopian Monarchy and make the country into an Italian colony governed by the Italian military. Russia and France have not declared war on the Spanish Insurgents, nor have Germany and Italy broken off relations with the Spanish Government — yet it is no secret that Franco's cause has been kept alive
with the aid of German and Italian troops and equipment, while the Government forces would have collapsed long since had it not been for Russian airplanes and armaments and French military experts.
Today in the Far East the world is again witnessing a war without a declaration of war that is of the utmost significance not only to the nations involved, but to the Western World as well.

Japan has gone to the limit in recent years to build up her army and navy. For a small country, she has an amazing military machine,
far superior to that of the Chinese
— though China herself has made progress in unifying and strengthening the country. China's greatest weakness has always been the corruption of her local governments —
as Oswald Garrison Villard has written, "The purchasing of Chinese statesmen and generals is Japan's long suit; it has advanced her and her policy of conquest far more rapidly than have her rifles and cannon." The central, Nanking government has usually proven unable to control the superabundant War Lords — each with his own interest at heart and each suspicious of the others. The situation as it exists in China, is as if each American state governor had a great private army which he could use for any purpose he wishes, even to the extreme of fighting the armies of neighboring governors.

As a consequence, plus Japan's far more efficient and modern war machines, it is believed certain that the Japanese will encounter relatively little trouble in conquering the north provinces. She will take over cities and accomplish destruction on a vast scale, and probably replace present local governments with puppet Chinese governments controlled by the Japanese, as she did in Manchuria.

But in the long run, Japan's chances of success are dubious.
China is a tremendous country,
with the largest population in the world. Not since the dawn of history has it been permanently conquered — over a period of many years, the invaders intermarry with the Chinese and are virtually swallowed by the immense country. China has more than half a billion people as against Japan's 75,000,000.

Furthermore, it seems inconceivable that Japan will be permitted
by other powers to advance unhindered into China. Russia is strongly anti-Japanese and will, if matters go far enough, throw her resources to the side of China. And if it came down to a Russo-Japanese war, most military experts think the bear would win.

England will attempt to limit
Japan's conquest in the interests of her own trade, and so, in all probability, will the United States and France. And lastly, it is a question whether Japan's financial resources are sufficient to stand a long struggle — today more than 50% of her government's budget is earmarked for the army and navy,
and she has a soaring national debt.

So here is another grave threat to world peace — the gravest, perhaps that has yet appeared. Whether war is actually declared is only of theoretical importance — to all intents and purposes a major war is now underway in the Far East, and interests directly affecting every nation in the world are involved.

A Business Week survey shows that business activity averaged 10% higher in the first six months of 1937 than in the same period last year.

Steel production rose 35%; automobile production 12%; residential construction 54%; lumber production 8%; electric power output 13%; factory payrolls 29% and factory employment 13%.

Farm prices rose 18%; construction costs zoomed 13% and department store prices upped 7%. Stocks averaged 18% higher and bonds 2%
higher.

THE LOW DOWN
from
HICKORY GROVE

Sometimes I wish I had a secretary or somebody, to do my figurin'
and maybe show me how I can keep afloat, and also spend more than I make, like Uncle Sambo and other geezers.

And the reason I am thinkin'
about such a thing is because I see in the paper where they are gonna hire another flock of secretaries down
there on the Potomac. So I reckon the figurin'
there, it must be gettin' heavier
and more complicated, 'cause this new bunch of secretaries, they are to be 10 thousand dollar a year babies. That is 60 thousand for 6 secretaries.

And any secretary who gets 10
thousand, he will need a couple personal assistants and half a dozen stenographers. And I have a friend out in Berkeley, California,
who runs a Secretaries' College,
and if his politics happen to be
O. K., I can see how his business will pick up.

And if I owned an acre or a lot down there within 100 miles of Wash., D. C., I would hang onto it, for the time is comin' when they will need more places to build buildings for secretaries.

Yours, with the low-down,
JO SERRA

Pie "Wealthy" In Health

Harbingers of the New York and New England apple harvest, the season's first Wealthies make their debut in the delicious apple pie pictured here, a perennial dessert favorite.

THAT millionaire of the apple family, the Wealthy, is with us again! Every day now tree-fresh shipments of this first apple of the Eastern harvest season are arriving in city markets direct from our orchards. On neighboring trees, McIntoshes, Cortlands, Baldwins, Northern Spies and all the other favorite native varieties are ripening for early harvest, but to the Wealthies,
this year fairly bursting with juice
and tangy flavor, go the honor of ushering in the new apple season in New York and New England.

Records differ as to how this magnificent apple got its name — but there's no doubt that the Wealthy is rich in its juice, in its crisp
white flesh and crunchy firmness.
The variety is a favorite eating apple and is perfect for all cooking purposes.

There will be plenty of Wealthies for everyone this year. The newly harvested crop is a bumper one,
and that means that the rains fell
and the sun shone in just the right amounts to grow plenty of the red checked beauties. Local growers are giving special attention to packing their fruit this year, which assures us that the native fruit in local stores is not bruised or marked in the least, and still fresh from the trees which grow practically in our own back yards.

With one-sixth of the country's population located in New York and New England, and one-sixth of the nation's apple crop grown here in native orchards, this year's anticipated harvest of more than 20,

600,000 bushels of the fruit means
one bushel for every man, woman and child in the Eastern states.
Even that generous supply is no more than enough of this favorite
all around fruit that can be eaten
from morning until night and enjoyed all day long. Apples are good for breakfast, lunch and dinner, and as a snack before going to bed. No school box is complete without an apple and what healthy child doesn't want an apple for that hungry interim after school and before dinner.

Of all the delicious, healthful —
and economical — apple dishes that we know, apple pie remains a traditional favorite. And Wealthies were "born" for pie. Here's a brand new, but tried and true, recipe for an apple-date pie with cheese crust that is delicious enough to win the honor of coming to your table as the first apple dish of the new season.

"Wealthy" Apple Pie
8 to 9 Wealthies, pared, cored,
sliced 1 cup sugar
1 teaspoon salt
1 lemon, juice and grated rind
8 dates, pitted and sliced

Pastry — substitute 2 tablespoons snappy cheese (softened at room temperature) for 2 tablespoons of shortening in your usual pastry
recipe. Mix apples, dates, sugar, salt, lemon juice and rind. Fill pie shell, dot top with butter, add tablespoon of water. Cover with top crust of pastry. Bake in moderate oven three-quarters hour, or until apples are soft and crust
nicely brown.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I—Rodney Shaw, independent trader in Mitchell's trading post, determined to fight the trade monopoly established by the John Jacob Astor company in the Northwest territory. He is met by Conrad Rich, an elderly clerk, Ramsay Crooks, Astor's dominant figure, and Annette Leclerc, local beauty and inspiration to all the traders, especially to Burke Rickman, a ruthless trader who is the instrument of destruction to traders refusing to amalgamate with the Astor company.

CHAPTER II—At a ball that evening Shaw recognizes Burke Rickman as the man who had previously robbed him of his partner and his trade, and as a dangerous rival for Annette, with whom he is infatuated. There is an exchange of bitter words. Annette is chosen queen of the dance, and after flirting with both Rickman and Shaw, chooses Shaw as king for the following evening. Basile warns Shaw to hasten his departure and tells him an old man awaits him at his tent. Shaw finds Leslie, an old free-trader, who proposes that Shaw join him and go to the rich Pillager country, where Astor is planning to send Rickman. He shows him a map and an Indian ceremonial stone given him by Standing Cloud, Pillager chief. Shaw promises his answer the following evening. Shaw accepts Leslie's offer.

CHAPTER III—The spying Rickman finds Annette alone and artfully belittles Shaw, agitating Annette into boasting of his plans, until Rickman learns of the partnership and the departure for rich pillager ground. He follows Shaw to Leslie's camp and hides within earshot. Shaw finds Leslie very ill, attended by his clerk, Giles. With Giles as a witness, Leslie gives Shaw the map and the Indian stone. After Shaw departs, Leslie dies. Rickman ascertains the old man's death, and plunges a knife into his heart. Shaw, reaching his camp, finds soldiers with a warrant for his arrest on a charge of murdering Leslie. He sees Rickman in the crowd ready to take him to prison, and realizes the foul trick. Annette flees the black feather near Shaw's camp, and keeps it. Basile reports to Shaw, in prison, that Rickman embarks the following day, and that Giles is intimidated from telling the truth. Shaw, impatient at the delay, orders Basile to hold all in readiness for the moment he can escape. The following morning, Basile reports that Rickman has departed, after Annette has made love to him.

CHAPTER IV

At least one other in the village had spent a night of distress.

It seemed to Annette Leclerc as dawn broke that the wells of her tears had gone dry.

Burke Rickman came and Annette would not see him. She paced the rooms; started out a score of times; turned back, cried, tossed clothing and pillows and books about; refused food, wept again.

Not until her aunt, frightened, now, by the girl's behavior and eager to do what she could to ease her mind, panted home with the word that Rickman was about to march did Annette quiet.

It was a tense and desperate quietude which then possessed her. Annette came close and embraced her aunt, saying:

"The way is clear, now, dear one! I must see Burke. Go and ask him to come. Without delay, dearest! Without delay, now!"

Rickman came in answer to the summons. He came, clad in his buckskin with his departure but a brace of hours away.

"Burke, I've sent for you to do what no girl craves to do: to admit wrong, to beg forgiveness!"

His pulse picked up at that and a covetous instead of a baffled gleam showed in his hard, blue eyes.

"You are forgiven, dear Annette, before forgiveness is asked!" He advanced toward her, taking her hands in his. "Did you think for a moment I felt that you were light-headed enough to take serious stock in a mere upstart?"

Her eyes filled and his expression softened somewhat. Not for him to know the emotion prompting these tears!

"And now . . . You see . . . You're intending to leave? After I've found again my lost senses, you'll leave me here?" Color came quickly into his cheeks at that. She'd never spoken so tenderly to him.

"Not for long! The one season, only! Just—"

"The one season! You speak so lightly of endless months? You be little hours that can stretch themselves into years?"

"Then come with me, Annette!" he begged, on a knee before her, his arms seeking to draw her close. "Come with me today! March with me and I'll make—"

"The interior?" she cried, voice atremble. "Oh, I could not stand it, Burke! I'd perish in the interior! It's you I need . . . You, here, close, safe!" She stroked his hair, she patted his cheek, she pleaded and begged and did not surrender to his lips until all else she could think of had failed.

And her kisses failed, as well. He would not be seduced from his intent. Desire for her was strong, but ambition, as well, as mighty.

A messenger came summoning Rickman, and Annette threw herself upon him, desperate in her pleas. She followed him to the gate, making a scene such as villagers had never beheld before, and it was this Basile watched and reported to Rodney Shaw.

But Basile did not see all, heard nothing whatever. He did not observe Rickman's attempt at a final kiss; did not see Annette twist and squirm from his arms; could not hear her one honest word of the entire passage.

One word, a strained, gasped: "Never!"

It was that word which sent Rickman away, an unhappy, if commanding figure.

And so Burke Rickman had a day and a half the advantage, even though events might give Rodney his freedom of movement before another dawn.

Indeed, it seemed until late afternoon that another quiet northern night would follow. But as the sun began to drop a murk appeared in the south, and the wind veered and softened and a thunder head rose above the strait and Rodney's heart picked up its measure.

Basile came, on the pretext that the men were demanding the balance of their compensation, and Rodney told him to trade what remained of the packs.

"The storm will come, master."

"And give me cover for my task!" When the revelry is at its best, launch the canoe. Wait for me on the northern side of the island. I'll cry as a great owl."

The storm broke at midnight, a furious lashing of wind and playing of lightning and cannonade of thunder. Tentatively, Rodney touched the bar, and drew its edge slowly along the softer metal. Its rasp was covered by the drum of rain and wind in the trees.

And then began his battle with his prison. Savagely he sawed with the short file, putting all the strength he could bring to bear against the cutting edge. Sinewy as he was, the task was labor.

The first bar went in twain and by a tentative test he knew his strength as great enough to bend it outward . . . But two more bars remained before he could hope to squeeze his broad shoulders through the opening. He sawed madly . . .

The second bar yielded and the edges of the file were dulling. Another thunder shower impending and lightning became more frequent.

The third bar was sundered and he dropped the file, atremble in every muscle. The sentry passed beneath his window, moving slowly on toward the clump of cedars. Rodney gripped the first bar with both hands and leaned against it. Slowly it yielded. The bar protruded at an angle outward.

The guard did not look up. The second bar bent before Rodney's strength, and then the third. His fingers gripped the outside edge of the stone window ledge. He leaped, wriggling himself outward, belly on the sill.

He breathed free air. His head and shoulders were outside the prison. He wriggled frantically. The whitewashed wall of the building spread below him. In another second he would be silhouetted against it for any eye to see.

And the last lightning flare of the spent storm revealed him, hanging there, swinging like a pendulum, ready to drop to the turf below.

"Halt!"

The sentry's shout went through Rodney like a knife stab.

He let go his hold. He dropped, rolling in the wet grass. He was on his feet, crouching, gauging the approach of the soldier whose feet thudded on the path.

Shaw backed a step, gripped the corner of the building, swung around it, and began to run.

"Halt, or I fire!" the guard cried. "Fire and be—"

The crash of the musket cut off Rodney's cry of defiance. He felt the breath of the bullet on his cheek and a savage elation swept him. The musket was empty. The sound of the shot would rouse the garrison and the roused garrison would rouse the village. But he was free, plunging into drenched shrubbery. Free, in cover, with a plan before him and all he asked was this meager chance at freedom!

"Halt, or I fire!" the Guard Cried.

He ran with all the strength in his chest and legs. He gained the shingle of the island's northern beach, standing there alone in the darkness. He fought to still his breath and gave the hollow, falsetto cry of a great owl. He listened and from somewhere across the water it was answered and he heard the thud of an oar against canoe rail and ran that way, crying out again . . .

Rodney was wading out, to his knees, to his hips. He was being lifted into his canoe by loyal hands as, streaming water, he gained his place. "Bravo!" he breathed. "Bravo, my brave children! . . . To oars, now! . . . March!"

Sixteen days, men had said, from Point Iroquois to the St. Louis? Shaw laughed as his canoe nosed into the bay which is the mouth of the river. They had silently passed Rickman's brigade encamped on the shore three nights ago. Sixteen days? he taunted. Eight! Eight days from the point of the Iroquois. Your names shall live forever, green in the boatings of the North! . . .

One passes the lair of opposition disdainfully, and Shaw did not even glance at the walls of the company fort they breasted at sundown, with its flag limp and men staring. They would see, yet, before Rickman arrived with intent ears to hear their telling.

On above was the first portage and there camped the canoe maker whom Leslie had told. The great canoe was abandoned at the native's camp and two smaller craft procured because the other would be unwieldy in the narrow rivers and difficult to transport on the long carries.

These arrangements made, the portage awaited. Nine miles it was; 10 pauses; a winding, twisting trail, up tortuous clay banks, over unyielding rocks, with the forest brushing the grim faces of men who toiled with great diligence over it.

"Up, good children!" Shaw cried, flinging portage collars at them.

"Up, Jacques, with your back of an ox. You will lead!"

Jacques, grinning, twisted thong ends about a package, shouldered the straps and nealed his forehead against leather. Another package was set on the first and hunched into position; a third, and the man grinned. Two hundred and seventy pounds he bore. But as he swayed forward for the first slow step he was halted by Rodney's cry.

"Un autre, mon enfant!" The smile died and a hurt look came into the fellow's eyes. "No?" Shaw's question was mock incredulity. "My good Jacques says No?" He stood a moment, shaking his head dolefully.

"Too great, the burden? Yes? But look. Observe the trader, then! Regard a back untried by the collar!"

He dropped to his knees and adjusted the thongs to a package. He slung it as he rose and gestured them to burden him.

Another, a third . . . "Quatre!"

He was bidding them do to him what had made the great Jacques demur. Amazed, they piled his burden higher. "Alors, cinq!" They murmured and burst into laughter and sobered quickly and did his bidding. Five packages? Four hundred and fifty pounds!

"Allez!" he cried and led the way with a grunt of command for them to follow.

He moved bent far forward, right hand on the topmost piece which towered above his shoulders, left arm at a stiff angle for balance. He swayed from side to side; the muscles of his legs bulged and corded against buckskin.

Upward, on and on, reeling as he gained the crest and then, upon level ground, moving steadily, stifling moans. And now he reached the first pause. His packages thudded to the ground, he straightened painfully and turned to watch the approach of his brave but humbled Jacques, who came on with many a gasped Sacree! and Rodney calling a good-natured taunt that one should puff so under half a load.

They snored that night beside a tiny stream threading abrupt hills heavily clothed with pine and hemlock.

Shaw frittered no precious moments of the hours, wasted no pound of his men's strength, but assurance, now, rode high in his heart.

He would have been less assured had he been back yonder at the company fort at the river's mouth to see Burke Rickman land and to hear what was told to him.

"You're certain?" Rickman asked. "A tall man? Tall as I? And broad? . . . And with a leathery old devil at the steering oar?"

Yes, that was certain. "Damn!" said Rickman, without passion, now, but calculatingly, as one who knows he must plan well and promptly. He looked at Conrad Rich, whose eyes were wide, and smiled without mirth.

"Fools!" he muttered. "They let him escape. After I'd arranged matters so he'd never annoy us again, they—!" He broke off, biting his lip, and Conrad started slightly as he sensed the fact that Rickman had betrayed himself and his part in the arrest of Rodney.

Rickman paced the room.

"At Knife portage yesterday?" he queried and did not so much as nod at the confirming reply. "Three days ahead. . . . Well! So we will show the jackass what it costs to forge ahead in rivers."

And now another company of men feverishly fought the turbulent St. Louis. A small company, this: Three men, a single canoe, with only an oilcloth and blankets and meager foods as burden.

Rickman's brigade was reforming for the river travel but this detachment went out ahead, light-footed if not light-hearted.

And so, as embers died in Shaw's camp, three pairs of eyes watched and three pairs of brawny hands clung to alder branches to hold their canoe in its vantage point while Shaw slept heavily, storing energy for the morrow.

He had taken precautions, had posted a boatman to watch. But the stream was noisy. Its rush and tumble drowned small sounds, such as a man cautiously wading under the alders.

So the guard could make no sound as a hand clamped over his mouth from behind, and a knife-but rapped his skull. No, the guard did not waken Rodney Shaw, but the thing which one cry from the guard could have prevented did.

He sat up sharply. The sound which had roused him came again and yet again; a hollow, crunching crash. His men were stirring about the dead fire, indistinct, moving humps, muttering huskily through their sleep.

Once more, that sound, as Shaw leaped to his feet and then came a splashing in the water, a grunt, a muffled exclamation out there in the stream. He was bounding to the water's edge, still bewildered by sleep and a prey of racing misgivings. Now came the sound of paddles, driven deeply and, in answer to his hail, a mocking, taunting laugh.

Rodney just stood there, staring at the gaping holes in the birch skins and the broken ribs of his canoe. It was vast, irreparable damage, done by stoutly wielded axes. His transport lay wrecked, with his only source of replenishment more than a hard day's march behind!

He must retrace the way he had come, wait until canoes could be built, lose all he had gained and more. Well, it was so; no other procedure was open.

WATER POEMS

An episode in an amateur photographer's picture Odyssey of the travels of water. Exposure 1.22 at 1/25 second.

THE moods of water, tumbling, bubbling, gushing, spouting, dashing, splashing, trickling, rolling, rippling, dripping, glad, angry, smooth, rough, serene, peaceful, make adjectives for poets. For the amateur photographer with any poetry in his soul whatever, they make themes for beautiful pictures and the subject of a delightful picture hobby.

We know of one amateur photographer who used his camera to picture the grand circle water makes in its journey from land to sea to the clouds and back to the land again. This picture epic of water began with a photograph of a tiny woodland spring, then pictures of a rivulet, a brook, a river, a mightier river with its waterfalls and cataracts, the bay through which it flowed into the ocean, the ocean itself, a cloud and sunbeam picture over the ocean, thus picturing water being caught up for its return journey, and finally rain.

This idea far from exhausts the possibilities of poetic water pictures, especially when human interest is added. The majestic sweep of water over Niagara Falls is a poem in itself but a honeymooning pair in the foreground adds romance. A fair swimmer in clear water on which sunshine is shimmering creates a poetic pattern of life and light. A pseudo-moonlight picture over a placid lake of a youth and a maid in a canoe (a shot into the setting sun with a small lens opening) gives a poetic mood to "the waters stilled at even." Foam at the prow of a careening yacht or its churning wake over the stern depicts the poetry of motion.

Verses may be illustrated. "Where the breaking waves dash high on a stern and rockbound coast" is a place for photographs of one of water's most inspiring moods, and then, from the hilltops "there is not in the wide world a valley so sweet, as that vale in whose bosom the bright waters meet."

Endless are your opportunities for making delightful photographs of water scenes. But there's a trick to successful water photography. It's largely a matter of shooting so that the pictured water has the right "feel" or texture.

For example, it's possible to shoot spray too fast, so that it has a hard, brittle look, thereby losing its essential sense of movement. On the other hand, rippling water should be shot fast enough so that the ripples are distinct, each with its own highlights.

Another point is lighting. Choose the angle that gives you the maximum "texture," the characteristic interplay of light and shade. No one can tell you exactly how to go about this; a little experimenting will tell you better than volumes of words. But keep this in mind. Any fair-sized body of water reflects a lot of light. Your exposures, therefore, can be faster or, preferably, your "stop" smaller than for a comparable summer landscape.

Down The Road

By CHARLES M. UPHAM
Engineer-Director

Good Roads and Good Living

A road can make or break a man. It wields a tremendous influence in his life. It carries him forward, if it is a good road, to success and the attainment of a happy and well rounded life. It bogs him down, if it is a bad road, and he drops far behind his neighbors in the pursuit of a better life; it retards his ambitions and decreases his usefulness, it mires his ability to earn and lowers his standard of living.

A few months ago in the post-office of a small Carolina town I ran across two young men that I had not seen in a long time. I had met them and their father fathers eleven years ago on a trip through the state as highway engineer. Although these young men live only a few miles apart, the farm on which each was born and brought up has its own secondary road access to the main highway that leads to town and the world beyond. One of these secondary roads is a good road, properly constructed and periodically maintained. The other is a deplorable collection of ruts that would not justify the name of cowpath. The same condition existed eleven years ago.

The two young men came into the postoffice separately. As I talked to the first one, I learned that he was a college graduate with special training in journalism. He told me of plans to publish the town's first weekly newspaper. He was eager, well-spoken and forceful. He is the son of the farmer who lives on the good secondary road.

The other young man was awkward and unimpressive when I talked to him. He was embarrassed by his lack of conversational ability. I asked him what he was doing and he said, "Nothing much."

I guess." He did not get to finish grammar school. He is in a rut and has no destination. He is the son of the farmer who lives on the bad secondary road. He is the product of eleven wasted years that can only be blamed on the unpardonable condition of a road that has continued to keep him isolated from the good things of life. His is the pitiful story of a boy deprived of schooling by the impassability of the road in front of his home that prevented the school bus from picking him up and carrying him with the other children to the centralized school fifteen miles away. His is the sad tale of a young man without funds to obtain outside education in the form of a profession or trade because a bad road has continued to defeat his father's efforts to get his produce to a market, comparatively speaking, only a stone's throw away.

The question today is the same as it was eleven years ago. Do our law-makers unmistakably realize that they legislate a better life for their fellow-men, their own neighbors and their neighbors' children when they legislate money for the construction and maintenance of good roads under proper administrative expenditure? Have they been convinced that good roads bring about good living conditions?

New 1937 Cars To Yield Billion In Taxes

More than $1,000,000,000 in taxes will be paid during their lifetime on the 2,540,955 motor vehicles which were sold in the United States during the first six months of 1937, it is estimated by the Maine Petroleum Industries Committee. Of that amount $600,000,000 will be gasoline taxes.

The committee arrives at the billion dollar tax figure on the newcomers to American highways by taking the average life of automobiles of eight years and multiplying it by the current annual tax burden per vehicle of $50. Each car at current rates, will pay better than $400 in taxes during its span of life.

Automobile registrations in the United States are increasing at the rate of about 2,000,000 annually, and pushing up automotive tax revenue to the state and federal governments at the rate of about $100,000,000 a year.

The Seasons

Our seasons are caused by the fact that the earth's axis is tilted 23 degrees, 27 minutes from perpendicular to the plane of its path around the sun. Hence the sun's rays strike the earth at a constantly varying angle and only twice during the year, when the earth's axis is at right angles to the direction of the sun, are day and night of equal duration. These are called the "Equinoxes," and indicate the beginning of spring and autumn. The points when the earth, in its orbit around the sun, has its axis inclined at greatest angle toward or away from the sun, are the moments when, respectively, day or night begins to get longer and are known as "solstices." It is then that summer or winter begins.

AMERICAN BOY INTRODUCES A NEW FOOTBALL GAME

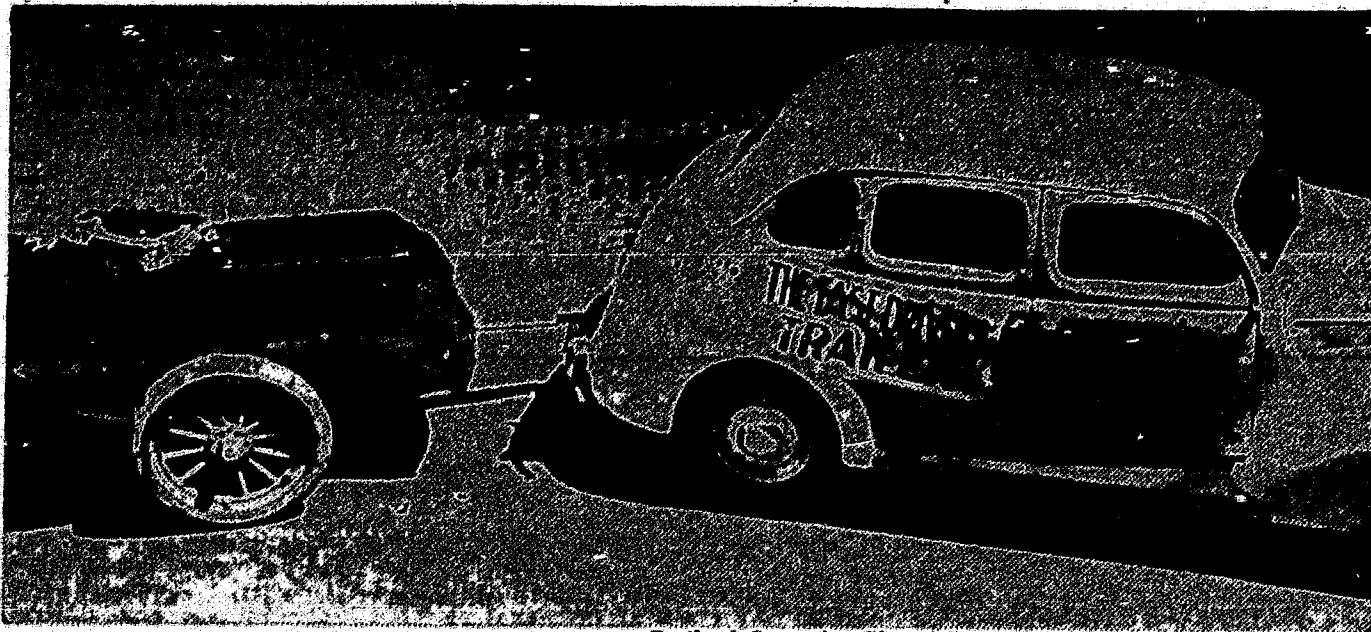

In the early fall issues of THE AMERICAN BOY there'll be presented the story of a new game—six-man football—fast as professional football, wide open as basketball, thrilling as hockey!

The game came to life through the need of small schools for some substitute for 11-man football, which was too expensive. Stephen Epler, a Nebraska graduate student in athletics, developed the game of six-man football to meet this need. In six-man football anybody can score, the possibility of injury from mass plays is minimized, and the game is open enough for spectators to follow every exciting development.

The new game is a hit. New schools are taking it up every day. In coming issues THE AMERICAN BOY tells the world about this practical new game. In addition, it presents The American Boy Official Handbook, which can be obtained from the magazine at 20 cents a copy, or 15 cents when bought in bulk.

NOTE: Subscription prices of THE AMERICAN BOY will be raised in the near future. Send your subscription order at once to take advantage of the bargain rates now in effect: one year at $1.00 or three years at $2.95. Foreign subscriptions 50c a year extra. Send your name, address and remittance to THE AMERICAN BOY, 7430 Second Blvd., Detroit, Mich. On newsstands the price is 15c a copy.

Drunkenness blamed in half of Oregon's auto accidents

Ambulance drivers in Oregon find evidence of intoxication in nearly 50% of serious automobile crashes, according to a survey made by the Oregon State Motor Association. "Official records, of course, do not reveal this," says the Association, which is featuring a coffin on wheels "shadowing the fast driver," as an object lesson in a "Let's quit killing" campaign.

LEWISTON

With Authorized Frigidaire Sales And Service At 125 Main St., Lewiston, Are Outselling All Others—Frigidaire With The Meter Miser Cuts Current Costs To The Bone—Keeps Food Safer, While Making Ice Cheaper Than You Can Buy It—Stop In For A Sensational Proof-Demonstration—Offer Splendid Service.

The Refrigeration Co. of Lewiston is offering an excellent service in distributing the new Frigidaire which is the product of the Frigidaire Division of the General Motors Sales Corporation of Dayton, Ohio.

They are very glad to demonstrate the new Frigidaire to you, and show you why value-wise buyers all over the world have selected it as their overwhelming choice.

Frigidaire does not cost any more than other refrigerators but they have five very outstanding abilities which makes them outsell all others. Only Frigidaire gives you these advantages.

The meter-miser cuts current costs to the bone. Actual electric meter tests prove it. It makes oceans of cold on a mere trickle of electricity. Thus it freezes more ice, faster and keeps foods safer, fresher, longer even in hot weather. It is the simplest refrigerating mechanism ever built. It only has three moving parts, including the motor. It runs quietly, trouble-free year after year. It is built and backed by General Motors and is protected for five years against service expense.

As it is known that ice freezes faster in metal trays than in trays made of any other material, every tray in every Frigidaire is a Fast-freezing All-Metal Quickcube Tray with the Instant Cube-Release. It releases ice cubes instantly, two or a trayful. It yields twenty percent more ice by ending waste of melting loose under the faucet.

The Frigidaire has a nine way adjustable interior. It can be arranged to suit any size or shape of food or container. This includes a Two-Way Frozen-Storage Compartment, a Two-Way Cold-Storage Tray, a Three-Way Sliding Shelf and a Two-Way Multi-Storage Section.

It also has a Food-Safety Indicator on the outside of the door, which gives proof at a glance of the Safety-Zone temperature inside the food compartment; the Automatic Try-Release which releases the ice trays from the freezer compartment at the touch of a finger; and the F-114 Low-Pressure Refrigerant.

The management and associates of the Refrigeration Co., of Lewiston in presenting the Frigidaire are efficient in their demonstration and service. Their salesmanship is unobtrusive. Their product stands on its merits.

ORIENTAL RUG SHOP

Located At 165 High St., Portland, Are Importers And Dealers In Fine Persian And Oriental Rugs And Have A Large Stock—Will Be Glad To Show You Their Wide Selection Of Fine Rugs—Also Feature Washing And Repairing Of Rugs By Hand By Native Experts—Tel. 2-3006.

The "Beautiful Splendors of the Orient" are to be found in the wonderful selections of Oriental and Persian rugs at The Oriental Rug Shop. These are offered in all sizes and colors and if you are looking for rugs an early visit to their showroom will save you time and money for you will find there just what you had hoped for in rugs and at a reasonable price.

You know that your Oriental rugs are a safe investment and that with proper care their years of service are unlimited.

Their Oriental hand method of washing and thorough rinsing preserves the life of Oriental rugs and protects them from germs and moth eggs. Beating a rug and shampooing by machinery is very harmful. Invariably, a steel beater will weaken a rug and make small holes in it. Ordinary shampooing will leave the soap suds in the wool which will eventually cause dry-rot.

Hand washing, on the other hand, will remove the dirt and germs imbedded in the fine wool and restore the natural colors and beauty of the weave to its original newness. Each rug is given the individual attention of native workmen—men who have made a life study of Oriental rugs. Even domestic carpets can be greatly improved by their hand method of washing. The colors come out fresh and clean, giving it new life.

They also buy, sell, mend and repair rugs as well as store them and in all phases of the service they offer you will find their prices very reasonable. They invite you to call and talk rugs with them as this places you under no obligation whatsoever. You can write them or phone them.

For the many reasons detailed above we can assure our readers that it gives us the most genuine pleasure to be able in this edition to heartily recommend the services of The Oriental Rug Shop.

Main St., Auburn, Features The "Iron Fire An Automatic Coal Stoker Which Is Easily Attached To Furnace And Will Eliminate Work, Save 30 To 50 Percent Coal Bill—Will Furnish Clean, Even Heat For Homes and Business Buildings—Now Is The Time To Install And Save Yet, That Furnace Drudgery—Tel. Lewiston 1427.

In a modern home or business building the Iron Fireman is a needed convenience and an economical luxury.

It requires attention approximately only three times a week and supplies clean, even heat for homes and all types of buildings. It can readily be installed on any type or size of coal fired furnace or boiler. It is manufactured, installed and serviced by an organization of engineers widely experienced in the field of automatic heating.

Economy, convenience and comfort are terms not usually associated with the furnace but, by installing an Iron

Fireman, these terms will become applicable to your own furnace. The less of its present greediness the Iron Fireman actually saves you fifty percent of the cost of heating by producing more heat than can be obtained from the old method of large coal, expensive egg, stove and furnace. Saving is effected, too, by its tenance of even heat—thus a too-hot house that has to be cooled (usually too much) by windows. And imagine the luxury of firing only about three times instead of a half dozen times a week. They will be glad to quote you and figures regarding installation of the Iron Fireman and for initial investment will install your home. They have installed in Auburn and surrounding territory that are giving thorough satisfaction. We would suggest that all see how easily it operates.

Woman's Ruse by Phone Ends Her War Dilemma

Pratt, Kan.—Mrs. Harriet Hobbie does not wear hair nets, yet she is thankful for them as the result of an experience in Barcelona, Spain.

With the Leftists in control of Barcelona, Mrs. Hobbie and other refugees fled to Marseilles. Her husband, however, remained in Barcelona, where he was an executive of a power and light company.

Another refugee recalled that her husband was in possession of a plaque and autographed photograph of King Alfonso. To deceive the censors she telegraphed her husband to send her a package of hair nets "under the bed."

The hair nets were there, but so were the symbols of the Rightist cause. The husband destroyed them. Mrs. Hobbie then remembered that her husband had a package of Fascist pamphlets in a magazine rack. She wired him for hair nets "in the magazine rack."

Failing to receive an answer immediately, she telephoned Barcelona. Hobbie admitted he was momentarily puzzled about the hair nets request, but when he looked in the magazine rack he understood. "I burned the hair nets," he told his wife over the telephone and she breathed a sigh of relief.

Mines Coal for 78 Years; No Time Off for Injury

Steubenville, O.—Harry Carroll, eighty-eight years old, of nearby Wolf Run, is prouder of his seventy-eight years in the mines without a "lost time" accident than he is of being the oldest active coal miner in the United States.

Carroll has been mining since he was ten, and recently the mining division of the All-Ohio Safety Congress honored him for his no-accident record and named him the oldest working coal miner in the country.

Carroll's no-casualty record almost was topped March 17—his eighty-eighth birthday—when he jammed his thumb. Although the joint of the finger is still swollen, he has never lost a day at the mine.

The hardy miner expects to keep on working just as long as he is able to wield a shovel.
